WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, Republican, made a charge in the Senate today that Japan secretly secured pledges from England and France and Italy and Russia in 1917, for the Shantung peninsula, as a part of her price of getting into the war.

Norris produced alleged copies of diplomatic correspondence embodying promises of England and France, and he said these explained the pressure resulting at the Peace Conference and in the peace treaty for the transfer of Shantung to Japan. He said the Senate's ratification of this agreement in the peace treaty would write the blackest page in the nation's history.

Norris charged that England's influence secured Japan's support to the British claims for the Pacific Islands south of the equator. France's aid, he said, was secured by promises to Japan to help draw China into the war.

Senator Cabot Lodge charged that the Shantung settlement was the price paid for Japan's signature to the League of Nations, the robbing of China being unheeded when protested by the Chinese delegates.

Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, urged the acceptance by the Senate of the League covenant without any amendments. He said although he was not prepared to say that the League would eliminate the main causes of war, yet it contained an agreement which probably would result in arbitration by nations of disputes and in most instances avoid the horrors and injustices of war, turned in a great many cases a war of national selfishness.
